8 steps to get out of trouble with what you feel

Step 1: Give yourself a moment to reflect.

Step 2: Identify how/what you feel.

Step 3: Accept your feelings even if they hurt, or make you feel bad, or asheamed.

Step 4: Give yourself some distance from what made you feel like that (if possible).

Step 5: Surround yourself with the people you love/like (if possible).

Step 6: Look for solutions.

Step 7: Put the solutions into practice. It is totally normal if you fail a few times.

Step 8: If you can't solve it by yourself, don't feel afraid to ask for help from your parents, friends or a specialist.

8 steps to get out of trouble with what you feel

Step 1: Give yourself a moment to reflect.

Step 2: Identify how/what you feel.

Step 3: Accept your feelings even if they hurt, or make you feel bad, or asheamed.

Step 4: Give yourself some distance from what made you feel like that (if possible).

Step 5: Surround yourself with the people you love/like (if possible).

Step 6: Look for solutions.

Step 7: Put the solutions into practice. It is totally normal if you fail a few times.

Step 8: If you can't solve it by yourself, don't feel afraid to ask for help from your parents, friends or a specialist.

8 steps to get out of trouble with what you feel

Step 1: Give yourself a moment to reflect.

Step 2: Identify how/what you feel.

Step 3: Accept your feelings even if they hurt, or make you feel bad, or asheamed.

Step 4: Give yourself some distance from what made you feel like that (if possible).

Step 5: Surround yourself with the people you love/like (if possible).

Step 6: Look for solutions.

Step 7: Put the solutions into practice. It is totally normal if you fail a few times.

Step 8: If you can't solve it by yourself, don't feel afraid to ask for help from your parents, friends or a specialist.

8 steps to get out of trouble with what you feel

Step 1: Give yourself a moment to reflect.

Step 2: Identify how/what you feel.

Step 3: Accept your feelings even if they hurt, or make you feel bad, or asheamed.

Step 4: Give yourself some distance from what made you feel like that (if possible).

Step 5: Surround yourself with the people you love/like (if possible).

Step 6: Look for solutions.

Step 7: Put the solutions into practice. It is totally normal if you fail a few times.

Step 8: If you can't solve it by yourself, don't feel afraid to ask for help from your parents, friends or a specialist.

BELIEVE IN YOURSELF

BELIEVE IN YOURSELF

BELIEVE IN YOURSELF

BELIEVE IN YOURSELF